

AUTO CAMP OWNER
MURDERS HIS WIFE AND ENDS OWN LIFE

Maurice Ratto, 65, owner of an auto camp on Mission street, carried out repeated murder threats last Saturday afternoon when he shot and killed his 47-year-old wife, Molly, and seriously injured her aged mother, Mrs. Josie Crawford. Then, standing over the body of his wife, he sent two more bullets into her body, after which he pressed the weapon against his breast and ended his own life.

The shooting followed years of bitter domestic strife between the Rattos. Mrs. Ratto, after two divorce complaints had been withdrawn, had recently obtained an interlocutory decree, which was to have been filed last Monday. A month ago Mrs. Ratto formally charged her husband with insanity. The charge was lately dismissed. The insanity charge was based on repeated threats made by Ratto against his wife's life over a two year period.

Ratto opened fire on his wife after a fierce argument and a struggle in which Mrs. Ratto desperately attempted to secure possession of the gun. Spectators who were attracted by the wrangling saw Ratto wrench himself free from his wife's grasp and deliberately take aim. After shooting his wife, Ratto shot her mother and then himself.

Ratto and his wife conducted an auto camp on Mission street, and a property settlement had just been reached. Mrs. Ratto and her mother were to pack their belongings and vacate the auto camp. A property settlement of $9,000 was to be given Mrs. Ratto.

Mrs. Ratto had returned to the camp for some personal belongings, which she had forgotten to take. Her mother had begged her not to go, it is said, but Mrs. Ratto was persistent. Mrs. Crawford was removed to the South San Francisco hospital in a serious condition. At present writing her condition prohibits her removal from the hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Ratto's funeral will be conducted from W. C. Lasswell & Co.'s mortuary chapel today at 1:30 o'clock. Services will be held at the Mausoleum, Holy Cross cemetery, at 2 o'clock.

COMMUNITY CENTER OFFICERS
MAKE PLANS FOR FALL WORK

Members of the board of directors of the Community Center Association and co-workers met on Friday, August 12 at the Center building. Many fine plans were made and the work of carrying on through the coming weeks will be completed at the next meeting. Cutting and sewing kept the ladies busy from 2 until 4:30 o'clock, when refreshments were served by the President, Mrs. M. P. Brown.

Every Friday afternoon will be devoted by these volunteer workers to the great cause of helping the youth of this district enjoy life in a wholesome and constructive manner, with no cost to the young people. For many years this work has been carried on by the President and her assistants, but only recently has the work been accomplished completing the building as a modern club house, with banquet hall, kitchen, gymnasium, lockers, and showers, and a large library room which is occupied as a branch of the San Mateo county library, and over which presides as librarian Mrs. Emma Woolsey. This newly completed building was sorely needed, and it will be a great and lasting benefit to this community. Much credit is due the board of directors. Let us all assist in this fine work by helping the youth of our district enjoy healthful pleasure in our own community.

Board of Directors: Mrs. M. P. Brown, president; Mrs. L. J. Atkinson, treasurer; Mrs. M. M. Grady, Mrs. Fredricka Volkman, Mrs. George Lagomarsino, Mrs. H. Von Kempf, Mrs. Camille Benassini, Mrs. George Wright, Mrs. Emma A. Woolsey, secretary.

POPULAR DALY CITY
RESIDENT PASSES ON

Last Tuesday night Mrs. Fred Schmidt, of 318 Woodrow street, passed away after a long illness. Mrs. Schmidt was the beloved wife of F. W. Schmidt, the loving mother of Mrs. Russell Orr, Mrs. Evelyn Dudley, Richard, Albert and Horace Deering, Mrs. Vera Sorg and Clarence Schmidt. She was a member of Crocker Chapter, No. 382, O. E. S.

Mrs. Schmidt was well known in civic and church circles, having been an ardent worker for many years until recently, when her health began to fail.

The funeral services were conducted under the auspices of Crocker Chapter No. 382, O. E. S., this Friday at 2 o'clock, from the mortuary chapel of W. C. Lasswell & Co.

COLORS OF LOCAL LEGION IN PARADE

The colors of Daly City Post No. 410, American Legion, were proudly carried in the parade that preceded the International Athletic meet held at Kezar Stadium last Sunday.

That the Post colors were at Oakland in the convention parade is unnecessary to mention. A large delegation from Daly City Post was in Oakland taking in the many features of a state convention.

The Legion aerial circus, scheduled for last Sunday at the Oakland airport, was of short duration, due to fog and poor visibility, according to the announcer. There you are, Daly City is not the only place that gets a little fog once in awhile.

On Wednesday evening, August 31, Daly City Post will sponsor a whist party in Eagles Hall. Bring your friends and spend a pleasant evening.

The next meeting of Daly City Post will be held on Friday evening, August 26, in the Woodrow Wilson grammar school.

Radio is playing a big part in advertising the National convention at Portland. On September 2, forty-five radio stations will give a half-hour program. Nearly every California station will take part.

This is in addition to regular Tuesday night programs from Portland, from 10:30 to 11 P. M.

Plans for the dedication of the San Francisco War Memorial on September 9 are well under way, and from all reports it will be a preview of the Portland American Legion convention. National Commander Stevens has accepted an invitation to be present and make an address, and most of the bands and drum corps on the way to Portland will also be present. In addition to the national officers of the Spanish War Veterans, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Disabled American Veterans and other patriotic organizations will be present with uniformed bodies.

At a committee meeting one night Comrade Doug casually asked if "anyone present knew the difference between a Scotchman and a cocoanut?" No answer forthcoming, Doug remarked that "you could get a drink out of a cocoanut."

"Now, look here," said Comrade Dick, "I'm a Scotchman; do you want a drink?"

"Yes," said Doug, "I don't mind if I do."

"Well, then buy a cocoanut," said Dick.

DOUBLE WEDDING CEREMONY

At a pretty double wedding ceremony performed in the First Methodist church of Tracy, on Friday, July 29, Miss Jean Darragh, of San Diego avenue, became the bride of Walter Ronteen, popular druggist at McGraw's Pharmacy, and Miss Elsie E. Ronteen became the bride of Michael Emmet Wade, both of San Francisco. The ring ceremony was performed by Rev. Elliot L. Fisher, pastor of the Methodist church in Tracy, at 4:30 o'clock, in the presence of relatives and friends. The wedding was followed by a dinner and reception held in the rose room of the Tracy Inn. After a short honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. Ronteen will make their home in Daly City, while Mr. and Mrs. Wade will make their home in San Francisco, where Mr. Wade is employed. Rev. Fisher is a brother-in-law of Mrs. Ronteen, and came from Placerville, where he and his family have been enjoying their summer vacation, to perform the ceremony.

PETER BURIANI PASSES ON

Peter Buriani, of Brunswick street, who had been seriously ill in the Community hospital for some time, passed away last Tuesday. He is survived by a devoted wife, Clara, and by his children, Mrs. Vera Cerrito and Robert Buriani. Mr. Buriani is also survived by Adolph, Antonio and Albert Buriani, his brothers, and by Mrs. Mary Delucchi and Mrs. Eva Barron, his sisters. Mr. Buriani was 46 years of age, and was a native of Buenos Aires, Argentine Republic. The funeral was conducted from the mortuary chapel of W. C. Lasswell & Co., last Friday morning, at 9:45. A requiem high mass was celebrated in Our Lady of Perpetual Help church at 10 o'clock. Interment was in Holy Cross cemetery.

ROOKIES LOSE CLOSE GAME

The Daly City Rookies lost their first game last Saturday to the Nineteenth Street Baths by a score of 6 to 3, in a close event, the Rookies garnering seven hits, while the Baths made twelve hits. Henry Telleria, the Rookies' center-fielder, and Walt Hanchen, the Rookies' pitcher, did a fine job of hitting, each gathering two hits. The batteries for the Daly City Rookies were Hanchen, pitcher, and Heggum, catcher. The Rookies' standing now is one victory and one defeat.

HICKEY'S RECORD WINS APPROVAL

The name of Supervisor Thomas L. Hickey will be presented again to the electors of this county at the Primary Election on August 30, 1932. On four previous occasions the people have elected him as their Supervisor with substantial majorities. He is now seeking re-election and we hasten to assure him of our hearty endorsement.

THOMAS L. HICKEY

Mr. Hickey needs no introduction to readers of this paper, who are familiar with his record and have benefited by his activities. To review his achievements may seem like the repetition of an oft-told tale, but a brief word-picture of this man who has made county history may serve to remind us of his value to the Board of Supervisors and of the urgent desirability of his re-election.

Supervisor Hickey is a big man in every way. Of large stature, of broad vision, and of wide sympathy, he stands out boldly in public attention. The strength and enthusiasm which have made him a successful business man have been given unreservedly to the service of the people for sixteen years.

He enjoys a perfect home background, is intensely patriotic, is ever loyal to his friends and passionately devoted to all the interests of San Mateo county.

During the sixteen years of his official service the growth of the county has been amazing, and in this great work of development he has taken a leading part. The weekly record of the meetings of the county Supervisors reveals the story of his constant anxiety to move forward and at the same time demonstrates that he was ever mindful of the true economy which the taxpayer demands. He has been the avowed enemy of public debt wherever and whenever progress could be contrived without it. No county bond issue has been found necessary during his term of office.

In the course of Mr. Hickey's four terms many problems have been considered by the Board, and on every occasion he has contributed timely suggestions and devised practical plans in his own vigorous and convincing manner. He has applied the contagious optimism of his remarkable personality to the routine of the Board business and has provided the inspiration necessary for true progress.

Supervisor Hickey presents that powerful combination of strength and gentleness which go to make the ideal public representative. He has always been eloquent and impassioned in debate for principle and carefully considerate and courteous in dealing with those whom he counts it both an honor and privilege to serve.

The outstanding merit of Mr. Hickey have already been publicly recognized by an official of the Labor Council and appropriate reference has been made to the work he has accomplished in connection with projects shared by San Mateo and San Francisco counties. He is well known and highly respected in official circles in Sacramento and his valuable experience and wise counsel have been sought by the highest representatives of the people at the capital.

Special mention may be made of the excellent work accomplished largely by the efforts of Mr. Hickey in the matter of highway improvement and boulevard development. Travelers moving swiftly and smoothly over the county's spacious roadways may well feel grateful to Supervisor Hickey, the "Road Builder," who has converted impossible pavements and dirt lanes into majestic thoroughfares. His foresight and energy have satisfied the hopes and fulfilled the dreams of all who longed for comfort and convenience in travel.

Mr. Hickey has conscientiously given the interests of San Mateo county first place in his time and attention. He has not only attended all meetings of the Board, but has invariably taken a prominent part in all discussions of county business. His careful study of conditions and his wide knowledge of the ways of men have made his service on the Board unusually valuable at all times.

On the strength of his remarkable record Supervisor Hickey comes before the people of the county once more and we are sincerely pleased to take this opportunity of endorsing his candidature. He is hearty, capable and earnest, vigorous physically, alert in mind and always prepared to arrange and plan for greater progress. He is in tune with the times, in touch with the people, and fulfils every requirement of the important office in which he has made so distinguished a record.

DESCRIBES PLANS FOR
WIDENING OF STREET

In the issue of the San Francisco Chronicle of Sunday, August 14, appeared a very interesting article by Leon J. Pinkson, automobile editor of the Chronicle, describing the plan of widening Mission street. This is a splendid article, fully describing this unique and modern plan of highway construction which should be of interest to Daly City residents.

THE LADIES' HOME CLUB

The Ladies' Home Club will have a soical afternoon at their club house on Werner avenue, on Tuesday, August 23, at 2 P. M. All their friends are invited. The month of September will be devoted to the making of layettes for the babies of this community, a work which was started last year by the President, Mrs. Lillian Landini, and will continue through the winter, much to the interest of the members.

LOMITA PARK NINE
DEFEATS EAGLES

The Lomita Park team defeated the Daly City Eagles last Sunday, 7 to 5, on the Jefferson Union high school grounds. With Davies and Geagan both out of the lineup, the Eagles' infield was badly broken up for this game and weakened their defense. Hawley, who relieved Ford in the first inning, twirled a good game, but Yeoman's, Lomita Park pitcher, also twirled a great game.

The Eagles rallied in the final inning, but the two runs that would have tied up the game were left standing on the bases.

The crowd was not very large, due to the Firemen's picnic.

This coming Sunday on Jefferson Union high school grounds, the Daly City Eagles will play Macey Movers, one of Oakland's fast semi-pro teams. With Davies, Geagan, Rettig and Walsh lined up for infield duty, a good game should result.

The box score follows:

FALL RACING MEET
OPENS ON SEPT. 22

Stake winners of the J. A. Parsons establishment are likely to be seen under colors at the Fall race meeting at Tanforan to open Thursday, September 22. In other seasons at Tanforan runners in the Parsons silks, mostly sons and daughters of Seth, have had a large following among the fans, as the horses from that stable have a way of running fast and far.

"Fresh" thoroughbreds are always favored by students of form as it is considered they are more likely to do their best after a long rest than when they have been campaigned in many parts of the country over a period of six months or more. No one can say that the Parsons gallopers are anywhere near being stale, as they have not been raced this summer.

Seth's Hope, winner of the San Francisco Handicap in its renewal last year at Tanforan; Seth's Pride, Lady Seth which made a record over the popular Club House route at the Peninsula course, and half a dozen youngsters are recalled by racing enthusiasts as having made history in previous sessions at the San Bruno plant.

Owner Parsons and his son Clarence Parsons have written up from their farm at Nestor, near the Mexican border, applying for stalls, and in the letter stated that their "stock" could not look any better than at present, and promising to keep up the fast clip set at other meets at Tanforan.

Walter Hoffman, Jr., who races nom de course R. C. Stable, has sent in an application to the Pacific Coast Breeders Association for stalls for a number of mature and young horses now at his Rancho Casitas. Hoffman is a breeder and for several seasons has had Crystal Tennant, winner of the Cofroth Handicap, in the breeding paddock. As do other pioneer members of the Breeders Association, the Southern sportsmen takes great delight in seeing a home-bred come down in front.

Bill Hartman, who campaigned the Pacific Coast Breeders Handicap winner Bahamas and other good ones at Tanforan in the last two seasons, is planning early shipment to San Bruno. After Tanforan closed in the spring, Hartman had his string at several Eastern courses, but in the last few weeks he has been giving them a "spell."

SEWING CIRCLE TO MEET

Crocker Chapter held a whist party at the Masonic Temple Monday night, to the Welfare Board of Daly City, to the Welfare Board of Daly City. On August 26, at 8 P. M., Emily Twisten will entertain the members of the Sewing Circle at her home on Los Banos avenue. All members are looking forward to a pleasant evening with Mrs. Twisten and her charming daughters.

BOY SCOUTS GUESTS OF OLD GLORY POST

Old Glory Post No. 2044, Veterans of Foreign Wars, held their regular business meeting last Friday night in the Masonic Hall, with a good crowd in attendance. The Ladies' Auxiliary met in their new home in the Eagles Hall at 8 P. M. There were short and snappy business meetings, and all unnecessary business was tabled, so as to give the earlier part of the evening to the Scout movement.

Daly City Post No. 410, American Legion, and Auxiliary, were guests, and the gavel was turned over to Mr. A. Bodien, president of the Boy Scout movement in Daly City. Mr. Bodien spoke for some time on the Scouts of the two troops in Daly City, their activities and what had been accomplished to make a success in both the troops, finally thanking Old Glory Post and Daly City Post for the support both organizations had given to make the Scout movement in Daly City a success.

The next speaker was Mr. Roy Johnson, commissioner for the Boy Scouts in Daly City. His talk dwelt on the subject of how the Boy Scouts originated, giving time, place and leadership. He then took his audience step by step, year by year, to show the enormous growth of the Boy Scout movement.

Mr. Johnson then introduced Mr. Chester Smith, Scoutmaster. It is doubtful if any of us realize just what a boy of ours must do to attain the rank of Eagle Scout. Mr. Smith is a very interesting talker, and outlined the work from when a boy enters Scout work and the stages he must go through.

Everyone spoke highly of the interesting talks by the speakers, and no doubt many of the fathers and mothers went home with an entirely different feeling as to their sons in Scout work.

Comrade January of Old Glory Post, and also of Daly City Post, one of the members of the Boy Scout committee, also Comrade Crosby of Old Glory Post, were highly praised for the active interest they had shown in assisting the Scoutmasters at all times.

This was a record crowd, for over ninety comrades and their wives attended this meeting.

Then came the battle cry, "When do we eat?" But the good sisters of Old Glory Auxiliary were ready with coffee and cake.

Doc and his haywire orchestra supplied the music for the next two hours and you can believe it was snappy. Everyone had a good time dancing, and went home satisfied.

Couple Celebrate Fifty
Years of Marital Bliss

Mr. and Mrs. Dan W. Saylor, parents of Mrs. George Augustine, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary on Tuesday evening, August 16, at their home on Twelfth avenue, San Francisco.

The spacious rooms were profusely decorated in blooms of every hue in golden baskets. The couple entered the room to the strains of the wedding march of long ago, preceded by the sister of Mrs. Saylor, Mrs. Clayton Sauter, the bridesmaid of fifty years ago.

Standing under golden wedding bells, the couple received the congratulations of about seventy-five relatives and friends who had gathered to do honor upon this gracious and rare occasion.

Fred Granis, nephew of Mrs. Saylor, accompanied by the piano by his wife, sang "Oh Remember Me," which brought back many pleasant memories to those present, who had witnessed the original ceremony.

After refreshments were served, telegrams from all over the state were read by Harry A. Thayer, Keeper of Seals and Records of the State Council of the Order of Knights of Pythias, expressing their heartiest congratulations and best wishes for the honored couple. Among the messages were those from Judge Ben Bledsoe, of Los Angeles, Phil Katz, of San Francisco, Miss Elsie Carpenter, musical instructor of schools, Mrs. Nesbitt, Past Grand Counselor of Knights of Pythias Auxiliary, Captain and Mrs. Arthur Layne of the San Francisco Police Department, Elmer Robinson, Grand Chancellor State Knights of Pythias Council.

Mr. and Mrs. Saylor received many beautiful gifts and were made very happy upon this momentous occasion.

Mr. and Mrs. Saylor are blessed with four children and six grandchildren, Mrs. George Augustine, of Daly City, and children, Myrtle, Jessie and Charles, and Mr. Louis Saylor, of San Francisco, and children, Madeline, Robert and Richard, and Miss Myrtle and Miss Ruby Saylor, who reside at home with their parents.

WOMEN ENTHUSIASTIC IN THEIR SUPPORT OF SUPERVISOR HICKEY

An enthusiastic meeting of ladies of the Crocker Tract and West End was held on Thursday evening of last week, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Virginia Callsen. The secretarial duties were carried out by Miss Sylvia Mandeville, of 84 Risel street. About seventy-five ladies were present, and they unanimously decided to support Supervisor Thomas L. Hickey to the limit in his campaign for re-election and for the perpetuity of clean, wholesome and economic county government.

Mr. Hickey was the guest speaker of the evening, and he was supported by our Mayor, Mr. H. H. Smith, who endorsed without reservation the sentiments expressed by our Supervisor. Mr. William Bolger also spoke briefly, urging the ladies to co-operate in the fuller dissemination of the facts of Mr. Hickey's fine constructive service during the many years of his incumbency as Supervisor, First township, San Mateo county.

During the course of his remarks, which brought vividly to the hearts and minds of his audience the realization that in our Supervisor we have a man intensely human in the concepts of his office and duties, Mr. Hickey stated that he knew of no office within the gift of the people which approaches so closely to the home as does that of Supervisor, and the duties of that office are more intimately connected with the home than are those of any other official. It is his duty to look after those who need assistance and to watch the interests of those unable to help themselves, equally as much as it is his duty to create good ordinances, foster constructive legislation and to build good roads.

He referred his listeners to a perusal and study of the little pamphlet entitled "Real Facts," which presented in condensed form his official record of service in the best interests of the people of the First township, and which pamphlet has been checked against the county records by a member of the opposition for possible errors and misstatements, but without avail, as he was well content to stand upon his past record as the finest possible endorsement for his re-election to office.

He spoke of his successful efforts for the establishment of the County Social Service Commission, finally effected on April 16, 1917, and said he derived pride that it was the first such commission in the entire state of California, and that it had been since used as a model for many similar commissions.

Referring to a recent newspaper criticism by the Tax Reduction League commenting on our hospital and stating that we want to make it one of the best in the state, Mr. Hickey affirmed that that is what we are aiming for. He stated that when the occasion arises for anyone to be taken there for treatment, be they rich or poor, the best is none too good for our people.

I promised the people that hospital many years ago. It will take care of 200 patients. It cost $700,000, and I state with considerable pride that you owe not a nickel on it, Mr. Hickey declared.

He spoke with similar pride regarding the Relief Home, which was erected at a cost of $125,000, and which is absolutely free from debt.

Reference was made by the guest speaker to the wonderful County Memorial Park, which he said would stand as a monument for all time to those in whose honor it had been established.

Mr. Hickey referred to the fact with emphasis that in our county we have had an expenditure of $900,000 in the above mentioned three fine institutions, all of which are absolutely free from debt. Had bonds been issued to defray the costs, we citizens of San Mateo county would still be paying off not only the bonds themselves, but also the interest on them. In consequence of which we would be paying taxes much higher than we are today.

Mr. Hickey stated that he brought these facts to our notice in order that we might realize more fully the need of continued efficient service. "The personal contacts I have succeeded in making, and the intimate friendships I enjoy with the state officials at Sacramento and with the city and county officers in San Francisco are very necessary to our county and its welfare, and the esteem in which I am held by them is a just pride to myself, and essential to our best interests. The State Highway Commission is spending $500,000 a year, and when we need roads it is necessary that we go to them to secure our share of these funds; and you can get more from your friends than you can from strangers. It takes years to develop these friendships and to earn the goodwill of these officials."

"The foregoing is my challenge to the opposition, whose only charge is 'That he has been there long enough.'"

"I have no excuses to make and no apologies to offer, and you need make none for me. The constructive work of this county is going on; your county is clean; there is nothing wrong with it."

"You have not had a bond issue since 1913, and this in spite of the fact that ours is the second fastest growing county in the state of California."

"I think, however, that you are facing the possibility of a bond issue in the near future. Thousands of men are out of employment. An average of twelve men a day are calling at my home looking for work. Women daily wait on my doorstep to beg for an opportunity for their husbands to work so as to feed and clothe their children. The work I am able to provide on the roads is entirely insufficient to begin to care for their increasing numbers. Where are these men going to turn? These men should have an opportunity to make a living; and if not, the people generally must provide them with food, fuel and shelter. There is only one way to secure this."

"I have always said that I would not stand for a bond issue, but there is one I will stand for, and that is a bond issue to feed, clothe and shelter the hungry and unemployed. We spent billions in the World war for slaughter. In God's name if we can do that, can we not spend a few millions to save life? We all can do our part, and I am happy in the knowledge that within a very short time the press will announce that we are to have a bond issue; and when this announcement is made, I sincerely ask for your support in 'putting it over.'"

Judge Buck Saves County Immense Sum in 20 Years

With a little more than another week before the primary election of August 30, politics today is gradually gaining the center of public interest throughout the county. Candidates this year are, perhaps, more numerous than they have been in a long time.

There is wide interest in several political battles, but one that political observers admit is holding the center of the stage is the contest for Superior Court No. 1, over which Judge George H. Buck now presides, and has presided for forty-two years. Judge Buck is facing five opponents in his effort to retain his seat on the bench.

Friends of the jurist are waging an intensive campaign on his behalf, and as the campaign is drawing to a close are optimistic. Judge Buck has been an outstanding figure in county affairs for half a century, and his battle now is one of the most interesting the county has witnessed for many years.

Sponsors of the judge's campaign this week are pointing to the fact that during the past twenty years he has saved the county some $320,000, by handling the entire court calendar alone. In 1910 San Mateo county became eligible for two superior courts and judges, but was spared the expense of some $16,000 a year, which it costs to operate a superior court in this county, when Judge Buck continued the work alone.

A year ago, because of the county's rapid development and the great increase in court business, a new court was established. Judge Buck said today he was leaving his campaign entirely in the hands of his friends while he continues on with his court work. With a heavy calendar scheduled, the Judge added, he did not feel that he could neglect his work for politics.

He is confident, he said, that the county appreciates his service, and so leaves his campaign to his friends and continues on the bench.

Youthful Farmers Will Compete at State Fair

Five hundred Future Farmers of America are expected to attend Camp Lillard at the California State Fair this year, along with two accredited delegates from each of approximately 75 high schools who will attend the convention of the organization. This was announced today by Howard F. Chappell, regional supervisor of agricultural instruction, state department of agriculture.

A new feature of the Future Farmers' activities this year will be a contest in showmanship for which prizes totalling $60 have been offered. Boys who enter this contest will exhibit baby beef, sheep, swine and dairy cattle, and prizes will be awarded on the following basis: Fitting, cleanliness and general appearance of the animal, appearance of exhibitor and ability of the exhibitor properly to pose the animal.

The Future Farmers of America comprise high school boys enrolled in vocational agriculture classes.

AS YOUR
ASSEMBLYMAN

Col. Peterson has been a San Mateo County business man for many years.

He is familiar with county conditions and county needs, because he has always been active in civic and governmental affairs.

In seeking your support for his election to the Assembly at the Primary Election, August 30, he pledges the same active interest and fighting spirit in Sacramento as he is noted for here at home.

"Elect a man you know will work for your county."

A grant deed on file in the office of the Tuolumne County recorder gives the state 517 acres of land, previously owned by the Yosemite Lumber Company, for a right of way for the proposed new Big Oak Flat highway to Yosemite Valley. The tract is practically seven miles long and will be 600 feet in width throughout.

Stockton's $6,000,000 deep waterway project was 82 per cent complete on August 1, according to a monthly report completed by government figures. More than a half million cubic yards of material were dredged during the month of July. Assurance was given that the project will be complete by the end of this year.

His royal highness, the Prince of Wales, cannot visit the California State Fair which opens on September 3, but he will be represented just the same. W. L. Carlyle of Calgary, Alberta, manager of the Canadian stock farm of the heir to the British throne, will act as judge of draft horses at the California exposition, fair officials have announced.

Plans are being made for the most interesting sessions in the history of the organization when the State Bar of California holds its fifth annual meeting at Coronado, September 29, 30 and October 1. President Peter J. Crosby of Oakland will preside at the opening session and will introduce the president of the San Diego County Bar Association who will give a short address of welcome. Following this, the president will give his annual address and there will be reports by various officers, after which the oath of office will be administered to the newly elected governors.

The will of the people was defeated when Lake County's supervisors hired someone other than County Surveyor Fred W. Wilson to do his work. Attorney General U. S. Webb informed District Attorney Burt W. Busch of that county in an opinion given recently. The attorney general said that the county auditor was laying himself open to personal liability suit if he paid others than the elected surveyor for such work. Busch, in requesting the opinion, said that the practice of hiring outsiders to do Wilson's work had been in practice before he took office and has since continued, according to reports.

Dr. J. M. Toner, Director of State Institutions, has proof that the bad boy—the real bad kind who begin by playing truant from school and end in reformatories and prisons—are not "born bad." This is based on the report of Dr. George C. Sabich, superintendent of Whittier State School of Los Angeles, California's largest institution for juvenile delinquents. "More than 85 per cent of the boys at Whittier are turned back to society fully rehabilitated," Sabich advised Dr. Toner. "Most of them are the victims of broken homes caused by divorce, domestic strife and death of parents. An unpleasant home environment is largely to blame."

Ushering in the August highway construction program, bids had been opened for four projects in as many counties, representing an expenditure of more than $300,000. Low bidders on these projects follow: Los Angeles County—Paving six miles, Claremont-Riverside lateral; Griffith Company, Los Angeles, $227,985. Merced—Bridge across Merced river on Golden State highway; Rocca & Caletti Company, San Rafael, $99,853. Lake and Colusa—Surfacing 18 miles on Tahoe-Ukiah highway; Lord & Bishop Co., Sacramento, $44,429. San Joaquin—Bridge across Paradise cut, Santa Cruz-Stockton lateral; Clyde W. Wood, Stockton, $13,715.

At least thirty outlets, draining approximately $6,900,000 of the State government's funds yearly for policing, detection and prosecution of crime in this State were shown in a preliminary report given the California crime problems advisory committee recently. The report covered governmental cost of crime in California during the fiscal year 1930-31, distinct from any costs incurred by the Federal, county or civic governments operating within this State. Nine policing functions were listed, including the State bureau of criminal identification, divisions of narcotic enforcement, fish and game, forestry, corporations, banking, real estate and building and loan, board of medical examiners, State building and grounds police, and the California highway patrol. Some of these are not devoted entirely to crime cases, but all of them investigate alleged violations of the State's penal laws or are active in the detection and apprehension of criminals to the extent of incurring, the subcommittee estimated, a cost of $1,934,898 per year.

Holders of veteran welfare bonds, issued to finance farm and home loans for ex-service men, received a $963,370 "melon" from State Treasurer Charles G. Johnson recently. This sum represents the semi-annual payment on a total of $50,000,000 in veteran welfare bonds now outstanding. "Despite obstacles due to economic conditions, we have never defaulted in time or money in the payment of interest or redemption bonds," George M. Stout, secretary of the Veterans' Welfare Board, declared.

Increases in crime generally and decreases in juvenile delinquency were shown in the biennial report of California arrests filed with Governor Rolph by Clarence S. Morrill, chief of the State Bureau of Criminal Identification. Indicative of the crime trend, California peace officers made 100,834 arrests, a new State record, for the 1930-32 biennium, compared with 95,580 in 1928-30, 72,812 in 1926-28 and 52,352 in 1924-26. Morrill segregated arrests for the biennium just ended as follows: Male adults 81,138, female adults 5,940, male juveniles 13,715 and female juveniles 41.

Because of its great resistance to fusarium wilt, the Hopi lima bean now being tested in the San Fernando Valley promises in time to supplant the ordinary bush lima bean for field planting according to F. H. Ernst of the Los Angeles County Farm Bureau office. In a recent check made by Prof. W. W. Mackie, College of Agriculture, University of California, a variety of Hopi lima planted on a place in North Los Angeles showed only four plants out of 600 dead of fusarium wilt. On another ranch only three out of 600 died from the same cause. Eighty-four plants out of 300 were found dead of the trouble in a planting of the regular bush lines.

Possibility that budgets for state departments for the biennium starting next July might be cut as much as 25 per cent was indicated by State Director of Finance Rolland Vandegrift, according to reports. In communications mailed to heads of all departments Vandegrift said he had asked that budget estimates be submitted by August 31 and that no new services or functions be added to the departments. He also asserted there would be no increase in personnel and that the estimates would cover only those functions of the department as provided by state law. Vandegrift said state officials expected to cut the budget by $19,000,000.

Regional Director Show of the United States Forest Service has analyzed appropriations at the last Congressional session as allowing $3,584,615 for construction and improvement of forest highways, roads, trails, bridges and for fire prevention work in California during the current fiscal year. Of the total appropriation, approximately $2,000,000 was set aside by the Department of Agriculture and $1,500,000 by the emergency relief bill. It is the largest amount received for a fiscal year and means employment of many men but the exact number has not been computed. Labor camps for unemployed, established by the State with the co-operation of Federal forest authorities, will continue.

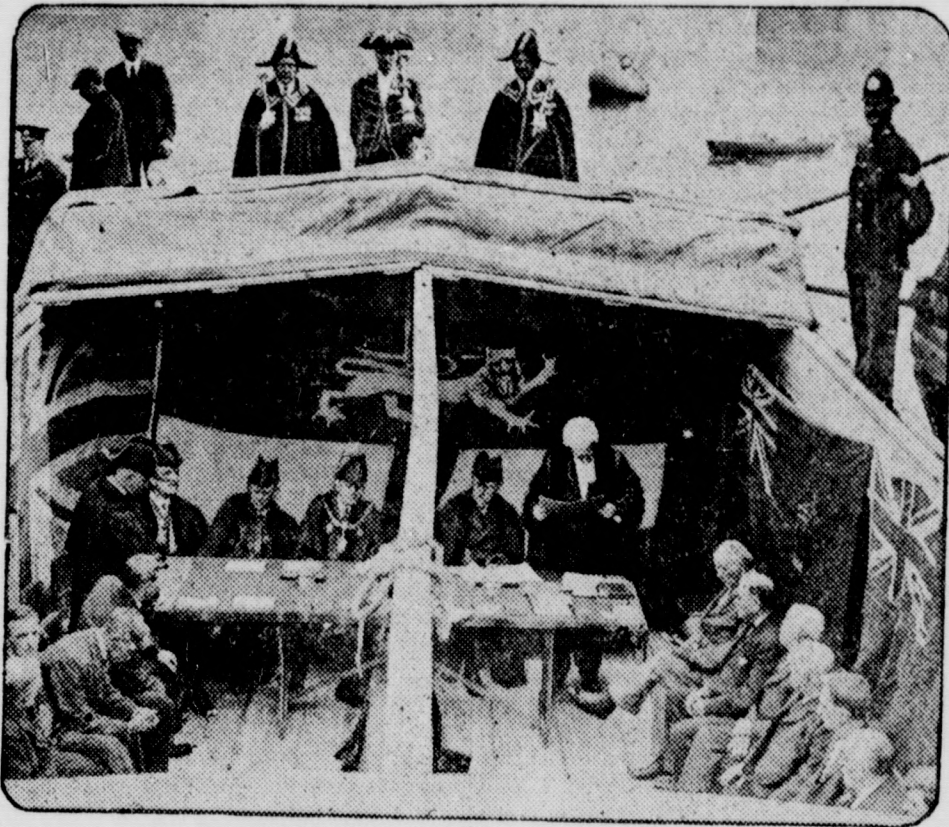

One hundred and seventy-four persons were killed in California automobile accidents in June, a decrease of seventy or 23.69 per cent over the like period in 1931, it has been announced by E. Raymond Cato, chief of the state highway patrol. June fatalities brought the total for the year up to 1116, as compared to 1216 for the like period last year, Cato stated. Accidents decreased 313 or 10.2 per cent during June involving 3981 vehicles in 2581 crashes. Total rural accidents decreased 9.65 per cent, while rural deaths decreased 38.76 per cent, Cato asserted. During the same period, the total city accidents decreased 11.21 per cent and city deaths 13.40 per cent. A majority of the fatal crashes occurred between intersections or on highways between crossings, Cato stated. Peak hour for accidents during June was from 5 to 6 p. m., with 8 to 9 p. m. a close second, with accidents being most numerous on Sundays. Cause of the fatal crashes were listed as "too much speed," "faulty lights," "faulty mechanism" and "wet pavements." Of the 1116 persons killed 514 were killed in rural districts and 602 in cities.

What is said to be the largest plow in the world has been operating in Orange County, and is described by A. A. Young, assistant irrigation engineer, of the United States Department of Agriculture, stationed at Santa Ana. It is the only plow of its kind and was designed and built to meet an unusual condition existing in the lower Santa Ana River Valley adjoining the seacoast. Originally this area was fertile land, but overflows from the Santa Ana River during floods deposited 1 to 2 feet of sand upon the rich soil and made it useless for crop production. Later this sand deposit was covered by a growth of Bermuda grass. The plow is intended to turn the sand under and bring the rich soil to the top. It has two shares. The smaller one, which is of good size, is set forward and higher than the larger share which is able to plow a furrow 36 to 42 inches in depth and 3 feet in width. The forward share turns the surface sand and Bermuda grass into the deep furrow where it is covered by the fertile soil turned up by the larger share. The plow is 4 feet high and 22 feet long. At turns, it is raised and lowered by a hydraulic lift. It is reported to weigh about one ton and to have cost $2,000. It is drawn by three heavy tractors running low gear and is reported to be capable of plowing 5 acres a day.

Announcement of Los Angeles County Fair officials that 20,000 square feet of floor space has been set aside for the junior fair at the big exposition September 16 to 25, brings to attention the importance which the boys and girls will play this year in the event.

A STORY FOR BEDTIME

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

PETER TAKES JIMMY SKUNK'S ADVICE

What you don't think of, others may. So lend a heedful ear. The thing that most perplexes you May thus be made quite clear.

"STUPID, stupid, stupid!" exclaimed Peter Rabbit as he watched Jimmy Skunk out of sight. He didn't mean Jimmy; he meant himself. "Here I have been running my legs off trying to find the hole of Rattles the Kingfisher without once stopping to think that I never have seen him near the places where I have been looking. Jimmy Skunk is right. He certainly is. The place to look for Rattles is near water. No one sees him anywhere else except when he is flying across from one body of water to another. Of course if he lives around the water he must have his home near it. That means it is somewhere along the Laughing Brook or over by the Big River. I wonder which place to visit first. Let me think! I most often see him at or near the Smiling Pool. If his home was over near the Big River I don't believe he

out of sight of the big lilypond on which Grandfather Frog spends so much of his time. It wasn't long before he heard the harsh rattling noise that Rattles the Kingfisher makes. He was coming up the Laughing Brook from below the Smiling Pool. Peter peeped out from behind the Big Hickory Tree and watched Rattles dive into the Smiling Pool and come up with a shining little minnow. Instead of flying over to the Big Hickory Tree and there swallowing the little fish, as Peter so often had seen him do, he turned and flew back down the Laughing Brook with it.

Peter scratched his head thoughtfully. "I wonder," thought he, "if that mean—that he has some babies at home and is taking the little fish to them. I wonder."

The more he wondered the more likely it seemed. He was still wondering when he heard that harsh rattle again, and there was Rattles the Kingfisher flying straight toward him. With a final rattle he perched in the Big Hickory Tree where he could see over the Smiling Pool. There he wait-would be at the Smiling Pool so much. Probably his home isn't far from there. I think I'll visit the Smiling Pool and do a little watching. There is nothing like watching if you want to find out things about other people. I ought to have stayed there in the first place when I asked Grandfather Frog about Rattles and he refused to tell me anything, except that it is true that Rattles makes his home in the ground."

So Peter headed for the Smiling Pool once more. When he got there he sat down behind the Big Hickory Tree where Grandfather Frog could not see him. Somehow he didn't want Grandfather Frog to see him. He knew that Grandfather Frog was sharp enough to guess just why he was there, and after what Grandfather Frog had said about minding his own business Peter didn't feel just like being seen. So he kept

They'll Have an Aerial Honeymoon

JUDGE RUPERT TURNBULL of the California Supreme court has announced the engagement of his pretty daughter, Loreta, world's feminine speedboat champion and holder of three international records, to Richard R. Blythe, New York publicist and former personal representative of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh. The wedding will take place in the fall. Mr. Blythe, who pilots his own plane, will fly to the west coast for the ceremony. An aerial honeymoon will follow. Above is a recent studio portrait of the couple.

THE BROTHERS

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

A MAN once kicked your father's shin. If others hadn't stepped right in, Yes, hadn't seen them, Got between them, Your father very likely would Have gone to jail, and gone for good

Well, men are funny. Just last night Your dad came in an awful sight. They nearly had to Carry dad to His bed—he couldn't walk just right. I said, "You've had another fight,

"An awful fight—just see your head!" "There wasn't any fight," he said, "Twas just the brothers And some others. I've joined that lodge I wanted to; Tonight the brothers put me through."

"They put you what?" "The first degree They put me through," he says to me. "The brothers, honey." Men are funny: They leave him lame, they pound him good, And that's what men call "brotherhood."

New Things in Cookery

THEY tell us there is nothing new under the sun and he that discovers a new star is not nearly so important as he who discovers a new dish, as we already have all the stars we need, but can always enjoy a new dish.

Some good lover of spinach has added another way to make it attractive. Serve it well cooked and seasoned with two or three sections of luscious grapefruit atop each serving—giving a tart taste to the vegetable which makes it more palatable.

Grapefruit French Dressing.

Take one teaspoonful of salt, one-half teaspoonful of paprika, three tablespoonsful of grapefruit juice and one-half cupful of salad oil. Mix the seasoning well, add the fruit juice and oil and shake or beat until slightly thickened. A small piece of ice added to mixture will hasten the mixing.

Golden Fruit Salad Dressing.

Take the juice of a large orange, the juice of half a lemon, one tablespoonful of butter, one-fourth of a cupful of sugar, two egg yolks and one-half cupful of cream, whipped. Melt the butter in a double boiler pot, add the fruit juices, sugar and slightly beaten yolks of the eggs. Cook over a low flame until thick, stirring constantly. Cool. Fold in whipped cream just before serving. If one has canned grapefruit one cupful of the juice may take the place of the orange and lemon.

Molded Cheese With Fruit Filling.

Take a tablespoonful of gelatin, dissolve in one-fourth cupful of cold water, add one cupful of boiling water or the fruit juice may be used in place of the water; add one-fourth teaspoonful of salt, one cupful of whipped cream, one chopped pimiento, one-half green pepper chopped and one small onion chopped, one ounce of Roquefort cheese, one cream cheese and one can of grapefruit. Soak the gelatin and when it begins to thicken fold in the cheese and whipped cream. Pour into a ring mold and chill. Serve with the drained grapefruit in the center.

SUN ECLIPSE AUGUST 31

An eclipse of the sun, total over a portion of the New England states and partial throughout the rest of the country, will occur on the afternoon of August 31, affording millions of people the opportunity to witness this most striking celestial phenomenon.

The extent of the eclipse will vary from total in portions of the East to only 10 to 30 per cent on the Pacific Coast. In the middle West and in the Southeastern States from 50 to 75 per cent of the sun's face will be obscured as the moon passes across it. The earth is the only planet in our solar system with a moon large enough to make a total eclipse of the sun possible. Mercury and Venus have no moons at all; Mars has two, but they are only about five to ten miles in diameter, so would only show as small black spots when crossing the sun's face. The larger planets have several moons, but none are large enough to eclipse more than a slight fraction of the sun.

An endless source of wonder to the layman is the ability of astronomers to predict the occurrence of eclipses with unerring accuracy years and even centuries in advance. It is known, for example, that a total eclipse of the sun will be visible along the southern border of the United States from California to Florida on August 12, 2045—or 113 years hence. The eclipse which will occur this month was predicted and described in great detail in a work published in Vienna nearly fifty years ago.

But if we can not understand how these wonderful spectacles of the skies are predicted, we may witness them as occasion offers and marvel at the mind of man which has discovered so many of nature's secrets.

WHEN THE PARTIES AGREE

When, in times like these, the two major political parties can agree on an issue, there can be little doubt concerning its importance. That is true in the matter of silver. Both the Republican and Democratic platforms carry planks advocating an international conference on monetary problems, with a view to stabilizing silver.

The word "international" in that sentence should be stressed. No nation can prevent the degradation of silver until other great powers join with it and agree on a co-operative plan. The fact that ruinous silver prices have deprived half of the world of a large part of its buying power

BIG AIRSHIP LAID UP

After covering some 140,000 miles in 250 separate flights without a serious accident during her eight years in service, the U. S. Navy airship Los Angeles has been placed out of commission.

The Los Angeles was built at the Zeppelin works in Germany and brought to the United States in October, 1924, by Dr. Hugo Eckener, now captain of the Graf Zeppelin. The big craft was turned over to the United States under the terms of the peace treaty. It was christened by Mrs. Calvin Coolidge with water from the River Jordan.

Because of a scarcity of helium gas in her early days, the Los Angeles and her sister ship, the ill-fated Shenandoah, alternately used the same supply, one having to lie up while the other went on a cruise. When the Shenandoah was destroyed, the supply was lost and the Los Angeles had to remain moored for several months until more gas was produced.

While the ship is capable of doing service for a few more years, placing her out of commission will save the government about $280,000 a year. Most of the Navy's aircraft personnel have been trained on the Los Angeles, and her recent crew will probably be assigned to the great new Macon, now under construction, sister ship of the Akron, largest aircraft ever built.

Owing to their great cost and expensive upkeep, as well as the danger of disaster, it is doubtful whether these mammoth dirigibles are worth while. Most of those already built have come to grief sooner or later through storms, explosions or other mishaps.

The only certainties are death and taxes, and unfortunately the taxes come first.

The mystery about mystery stories is how one plot can yield so many.

and brought international trade to the lowest level in decades, points the need for decisive and immediate action.

Each government is interested in silver. So is every business and citizen. It is a problem of world-wide scope—and at the same time is a problem which narrows down until it affects the prosperity of every home in the land. Silver also plays an important part in the development of our lead and copper mining industries.

WONDERS OF COAL TAR

Although most persons are aware of the importance of coal tar derivatives in a general way, perhaps few realize how many useful products are derived from the volatile matter released from burning coal, which formerly passed off as black smoke without a thought being given to its possible value.

About 1892 the first by-product coke ovens were introduced in the United States, through the operation of which this volatile matter was saved for re-distillation, resulting in the production of ten fundamental materials, known as benzene, toluene, xylene, phenol, cresol, naphthalene, anthracene, methylantracene, phenanthrene and carbazole.

From these are produced countless derivatives, from which we obtain many drugs, dyes, perfumes, flavoring extracts, explosives, poisons, fertilizers, and an almost endless list of commercially important commodities. Among the well known drugs so derived are salicylic acid, aspirin, phenacetin, antipyrin, and cocaine, besides more than 900 dyes. The sugar substitute, saccharine, more than 300 times as sweet as cane sugar, is produced from toluene, which is also used in the manufacture of the powerful explosive known as T. N. T.

To enumerate all the useful products manufactured from what was once considered waste matter would require much space, but the foregoing will give some idea of what has been accomplished in this direction through scientific research and experiment within a comparatively few years. That the future holds even greater materials heretofore considered as possibilities for the utilization of worthless can hardly be doubted.

BIG RAILROADER OUT

An event in the railroad world was the recent resignation under fire of Sir Henry W. Thornton, for ten years president of the great government-owned Canadian National Railways. Expensive management with tremendous deficits in operation was given as the cause of dissatisfaction with his administration.

Sir Henry has had a rather remarkable career as a railroad man. Born in Indiana sixty years ago, he was a star football player at the University of Pennsylvania in 1893, later a coach at Vanderbilt, then began railroading with the Pennsylvania as a $50 a month draftsman.

After gaining some experience and achieving a large measure of success in the United States, he was called to England in 1914 to be manager of the Great Eastern Railway. In this capacity he handled war-time transportation so well that he was knighted by King George and became a British subject in 1919. He was made president of the Canadian National, the longest railroad in North America, with 22,000 miles of track, in 1922.

Friends attribute his downfall to politics, which is inevitably mixed up with a railroad under government ownership and operation. His own comment upon resigning was "In my opinion a publicly owned railroad can be successful only if the management has the complete confidence of its owners."

The experience of most countries seems to be that a government railroad is seldom successful under any circumstances, so far as rendering efficient service at reasonable rates is concerned, unless it is heavily subsidized from the public treasury in one form or another.

A nifty scheme that worked is reported from New York, with the Chemical Bank & Trust Co. as the victim. Wearing the uniform of a guard of the U. S. Trucking Corporation, which is employed to transfer cash and securities from one bank to another, a man casually entered and told the teller he had come for "the money for the Federal Reserve bank." The teller passed out $56,325 and a receipt which the supposed guard signed. That was the last seen of the "guard" or the cash.

It would be fine if the nations could settle all their differences in the Olympiad manner.

Another bad feature of the situation is the slump in gangster funerals.

INDIAN MEDICINE

Old-time Indian medicine men were not all fakery, as most white people have been led to believe, according to Anton Hogstad, a leading chemist, who has studied the remedies used by aboriginal doctors. In fact, he declares modern practitioners are indebted to the Indians for much of their knowledge of native medicinal plants.

Primitive Indians were not so hardy and free from sickness as is commonly supposed. They suffered from colds, intestinal troubles, rheumatism and many other ailments due to exposure and improper diet. The medicine men were able to relieve many of these conditions through their knowledge of nature's remedies.

They used Seneca snakeroot for coughs, and it is still used. Black snakeroot was given for rheumatism, ginseng for headaches, blue flag for stomach troubles, and corn smut was used as an aid to childbirth and to stop bleeding. Some of the medicine men knew how to produce artificial sleep, and Zuni doctors were even able to render patients unconscious while operations were being performed by the use of a certain root. These are only a few of the native remedies which had real value.

Mr. Hogstad believes that the Indian medicine man could have passed the examination of a modern pharmaceutical board if the questions were limited to the native medicinal plants of North America.

THE CANAL PROJECT

Although few details of the proposed Great Lakes-St. Lawrence canal project have been made available to the general public, it appears that most people who know about the proposal at all have jumped to the conclusion that it is a most desirable scheme.

Some questions that are highly pertinent have been raised, however, by Marlen E. Pew, editor of the newspaper trade magazine Editor and Publisher. He asks what effect this canal will have on Chicago's drainage supply and on our internal water transportation plans. What of the diversion of freight from American railroads and American ports such as New York and Baltimore and the effect on the thousands of workers normally employed by these railroads and at these ports?

Canada seems highly pleased with the prospect; too pleased perhaps for Uncle Sam's good. For it is estimated that this project will cost the United States treasury some seven hundred million dollars—probably a billion before the job is finished—and that money must come from the pockets of American taxpayers who are already staggering under a burden that can not much longer be borne.

Maybe the canal would be a good thing for somebody. But it might be well to investigate who that somebody is before embracing the idea with too much enthusiasm.

HORNSBY LOSES JOB

Surprising to baseball fans was the recent dismissal of Rogers Hornsby, manager of the Chicago Cubs, although that club stood in second place in the National League. President Veeck of the Cubs announced simply that "it was for the best interests of the club that Hornsby retire." Hornsby said, "It's all right with me."

Hornsby has had a brilliant though checkered career since he entered major league baseball with the St. Louis Cardinals in 1915 at the age of 19. As a member of that team he led the National League in batting for six straight years, 1920 to 1925 inclusive. In 1924 his batting average was .424, an all-time record that has never been equaled. Then as manager in 1926 he won the National pennant and the world's championship, defeating the New York Yankees four games to three.

In spite of this amazing record with the Cardinals, he was traded off to the New York Giants in 1927, and was shifted to Boston in 1928 to again lead the National batsmen that year with an average of .387. At the end of the 1928 season, Hornsby was bought by the Cubs in baseball's biggest deal, whereby William Wrigley gave $125,000 and five players to obtain the Rajah's services, and made him manager in 1930. In a game with Pittsburgh last year he hit three successive home runs and a single, good for eight tallies.

Hornsby has gone to his home in Robertson, Missouri, for a rest, but it is safe to say he won't stay in retirement long. In spite of his 36 years he is still too good to keep down.

Much annoyance has been caused the widow of the late President Theodore Roosevelt by persons who have in various ways confused Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt's relationship with the great "Teddy." Some even think it is the former President who is running again, and about 300 persons have written to his widow congratulating her on his renomination. "I'm growing weary of it," she said, adding that she will vote for President Hoover.

Who remembers what the Wickersham Commission found out about prohibition, or anything?

There may be some G. O. P. bolters—but we doubt that there will be any postmasters among them.

One never knows what may happen to a sailor, as Count Felix von Luckner, famed German war-time raider known as the "Sea Devil," can testify. Although he has sailed the deep since he was 13 years old, he recently had an entirely new experience on a yacht on Lake Superior. He got seasick.

Flattery, to be effective, must be used sparingly. This applies also to other kinds of lying.

The depression has made folks less impulsive, it seems. According to the Bureau of the Census, marriages and divorces both decreased during 1931 as compared with the previous year. There were 6.1 per cent fewer marriages and 4.1 per cent fewer divorces.

We will be skeptical about those stock market advances until we get some late quotations on New York judgships.

Bank an EXTRA dollar... and put another man to work!

Doesn't seem reasonable? It wouldn't be if it were not for banking institutions which assemble the dollars of the individual and loan them out to finance manufacturing, agriculture, construction and business in general.

Few individuals realize that the machinery of banking enables one dollar to do the work of five to ten dollars, through the extension of credit to business and industry.

Thus, the single EXTRA dollar you deposit each time you go to the bank becomes a mighty influence for the betterment of conditions in your community, your state and your nation.

If the 3,296,331 savings depositors in the state of California would bank an EXTRA dollar each week, or each month, unemployment in California would be non-existent.

Bank an EXTRA dollar in this bank—or any other bank—and put ANOTHER man to work. Do it REGULARLY—and KEEP him at work!

COLMA BASEBALL TEAM WINS SIX GAMES IN A ROW

The Colma Merchants won their sixth straight game in a row on Sunday afternoon, at Portola diamond, by defeating the P. I. Republic team, 7 to 2. Dick Varni and Al Giusto led the batting attack for Colma, each garnering three hits. Petrocchi, third baseman for Colma, got the longest drive of the game when he hit a three-base drive in the seventh inning.

Next Sunday the Colma Merchants will play the Half Moon Bay team at Half Moon Bay. The Colma boys are out to win this game, because each team has won one game.

"21-31" Club Endorses Call For State Assembly

A group of young voters organized for "the purpose of improving the political situation in San Mateo county," last night endorsed the candidacy of Harrison W. Call for the assembly, and at the same time made sensational charges against Wayne R. Millington, one of Call's opponents.

The club is known as the "21-31 Voter's Club," patterned after the "20-30" service clubs. Membership is limited to those under 32 years of age, having at least a high school education. The club met Tuesday night at Legion Hall, South San Francisco, and elected E. E. Brawn president and Silvio Volonte, secretary.

The resolution adopted endorsing Call states that Millington registered in San Mateo county for the first time on January 2 of this year, and that he is a defeated San Francisco office-seeker, having run for the assembly there four years ago.

The "21-31 Voter's Club" believes that Millington has not been a resident voter in this county long enough to understand the county's problems, whereas it approves Call's "record, his length of residence in this county, and his platform." The race is between these two, the club believes.

Colonel Peterson For Constructive Economy

Never before has San Mateo county looked forward to an election with more interest than is being expressed in the one this year. Many important county and state offices are to be filled, and one upon which wide interest is centering is that of Assemblyman from San Mateo county.

Those in close touch with affairs of the county and state, say this is to be an outstanding year at Sacramento, with a deficit facing the state and various county issues to be considered. They agree that San Mateo county will need formidable representation if it hopes to gain proper recognition.

Supporters of Col. Frederick Peterson, of Burlingame, widely known civic leader, declare he is one of the strongest candidates for the Assembly post to be filled at primary election, August 30, or the general election in November. Col. Peterson has been a business man in San Mateo county for more than thirteen years. He is a veteran of both the Spanish-American and World war, during which he served with distinction.

In nearly every fight for civic improvement and better government in the county for the last ten years, Col. Peterson has been an active figure. He has organized and headed numerous civic and other societies, and a number of movements for improved conditions in the county. He is an experienced legislator, and is known to be familiar with all San Mateo county affairs.

In speaking of his candidacy for the Assembly, Col. Peterson says: "This, indeed, is the time for constructive economy, and our people should be asked to bear no greater burden than they are doing at present. The financial problems can be solved by prudent action and the elimination of politics. Should I be chosen to represent this county in the Assembly, I shall retain the same constructive and energetic principles that have marked my service in the past. I shall fight to bring this county to the recognition it so richly deserves."

Popularity of Natural Gas is Reported as Increasing

The amazing popularity of natural gas as a household fuel is reflected in increased business in Northern California manufacturers of household heating equipment. Since natural gas was brought into the northern part of the state two years ago, more than 15,000 furnaces have been installed in homes, 23,500 furnaces designed to burn other fuels have been converted to the use of natural gas, and thousands of radiant and other small heaters have been installed.

This popularity is attributed to the superior performance of natural gas in maintaining a healthful and comfortable zone of warmth throughout the home, without any attention. Factors in its popularity are that it is clean, does not have to be ordered ahead of time, no storage space or handling is required, and it burns without creating dust, soot, ashes, or cinders. But these advantages are all incidental to the fundamental purpose of fuel, which is to produce heat.

With the help of scientists and engineers, manufacturers have persistently improved their gas heating equipment until today it has reached a degree of perfection unimaginable a few short years ago. Now the touch of a lever produces instantaneous heat which is sustained as long as it is wanted.

The United States produces about one-fifth of the world's output of silver.

RESOLUTION:

WHEREAS the "21-31 Voters Club" was organized for the purpose of improving the political situation in San Mateo County, and

WHEREAS we are interested in securing proper representation for San Mateo County in the State Assembly, and

WHEREAS we find that Wayne R. Millington, one of the candidates for Assembly from this county, was not a registered voter in this county prior to January 2, 1932, and therefore has not been a resident voter of this county long enough to understand our problems, and

WHEREAS we find that Wayne R. Millington was a candidate for Assemblyman from a San Francisco District in 1928 and was defeated, and

WHEREAS we believe that the contest for this election is between Harrison W. Call and Wayne R. Millington, and

WHEREAS we have investigated Mr. Call's record, his length of residence in this county and his platform, and have found them satisfactory, now

THEREFORE be it resolved that the "21-31 Voters Club" hereby endorses the candidacy of H. W. Call for Assembly.

Regularly adopted this 16th day of August 1932.

Veterans' Welfare Board Deals Blow at Depression

Dealing another severe blow at the so-called depression, the Veterans' Welfare Board has distributed a melon of approximately $1,000,000 to the holders of 50,000 veteran bonds.

This melon represents the semi-annual interest payment of $963,376 on a total of $50,000,000 worth of Veterans' Welfare bonds now outstanding. A check for this interest payment has been turned over to State Treasurer Charles G. Johnson, according to George M. Stout, secretary of the Veterans' Welfare Board.

"With this interest payment," Mr. Stout declared, "the board has again been exceedingly prompt in meeting its obligations to the people of California who made this legislation possible."

"The board has been in existence ten years, and despite the obstacles due to present economic conditions we have never defaulted in time or money in the payment of interest, or on the redemption of the Veterans' Welfare bonds."

More than $50,000,000 has been expended in the last ten years through the Veterans' Welfare Board in the purchase of approximately 11,500 homes, and more than 470 farms for ex-service men.

SYNOPSIS

In the California sierra Mark King, prospector, sees Andy Parker killed by Sven Brodie, Parker's outlaw companion. King is on his way to the home of his friend, Ben Gaynor. King and Gaynor share with Brodie knowledge of a vast store of hidden gold. King meets Mrs. Gaynor and is impressed by her daughter Gloria's youthful beauty. He dislikes a house visitor named Gratton. With Gloria, King rides to Coloma, intending to "sound" Honeycutt. He finds Brodie with the old prospector, and animosity flares. Their companionship for a day, draws King closer to Gloria. Gloria and her mother return to San Francisco. King attends her birthday party there and is, he feels, coldly received. In a spirit of adventure Gloria accompanies Gratton on a "business" trip. At Coloma she finds her father badly hurt.

"Then," he said, "go turn the key in the lock. And hurry. Before anyone comes."

She locked the door and returned to him.

"Feel under my pillow. Got it?"

She found a small parcel and drew it out. It was a flatish affair and rectangular, the size and shape of an octavo volume—a flat box, if not a book. It was draped in a bit of soiled cloth.

"Quick," he commanded nervously. "Out of sight with it. Stick it into your blouse, if you can."

Catching something of his suppressed excitement, she obeyed.

"I managed a little note to Mark," he said when she had buttoned the loose shirt again and he sunk back, white and exhausted, among his pillows. "I stuck it inside the cloth. Lord, if I was only on my feet! But you'll do it for me, my girl? With never a hint to anyone?"

"I promised, papa," she said assuringly.

"Unlock the door again, then. There's somebody coming. Sit down over there, across the room. And leave as soon as you can."

Gloria sat in her chair across the room, looking innocently the part of a daughter in a sick room, when the door opened and the Placerville doctor came in. A moment later she slipped out.

Down the road she saw Gratton. He came quickly to meet her. She saw that he was eying her keenly, and her thought was that he was wondering if by chance she had seen the hotel register.

"I don't know just what to do," said Gratton. "My business is going to hold me here longer than I had thought. I—I promised to go back with you this afternoon. Would it be all right if I got a man to drive you back? I am terribly sorry, Gloria, but—"

"Business is business!" she laughed a trifle nervously. Then her inspiration: "I know! I can go to our mountain home; I'll phone mamma, and she will come up. We'll spend a few days, and—"

For an instant his eyes fairly blazed; they were bright with triumph.

"Just the thing! I'll go for the horses. I'll ride over with you and get right back here."

"But—"

But already, excusing himself hurriedly, Gratton was off for the horses. It was mid-afternoon when Gloria and Gratton came to the log house in the woods. Jim Spalding, coming to take their horses away to the stable, was plainly curious.

"We rode on ahead, Jim," Gloria told him, and Jim detected no false note in her gaiety. "Mamma is coming."

Spalding gave them a key and they went to the house. It was Gloria who unlocked the door; Gratton, his white face looking more than ever bloodless, saw her hand tremble. She hurried in, excused herself, and ran upstairs. She knew that the time had come when she would have to listen to what Gratton was going to say; she knew what the burden of his plea would be—she knew everything, she thought wildly, except what her answer would be.

On this floor was an extension telephone, installed for the convenience of Gloria and her mother. Gloria went tiptoeing to it rather than go down where Gratton was. She rang the necessary bell for the operator in Truckee and put in her long-distance call. Then she sat with the instrument in her hand, waiting.

She wondered when Mark King would come! This afternoon—tonight—tomorrow? Spalding had said nothing; she had not mentioned King to Spalding, since she had not mentioned him to Gratton during the long ride—Her telephone bell rang.

"Gloria! Gloria! Is that you?" Her mother's voice sounded strange in Gloria's ears—shaken with emotion. "What has happened, child? Tell me, quick! I am nearly dead with worry. Are you all right?"

"Of course, mamma. I—"

"But where are you? Where were you all night? Are you sure everything is all right?"

"I have told you I am all right. I am up in the mountains, at our log house. Didn't Mr. Gratton tell you—"

"Mr. Gratton?" Mrs. Gaynor was mystified. "He has told me nothing; I haven't seen him. I tried to phone him—oh, I have phoned everybody we know!—and he is out of town, and—"

But Gloria, panic-stricken by something her mother had said, cried:

"You have phoned everybody! Oh, mamma! What—what do you mean?"

"When you didn't come in last night—I have been crazy with worry! I thought you might be spending the night with one of your friends. I rang up Georgia Stark and Mildred Carter and the Farrillees—and even the emergency hospital. I thought—"

The rest was only a meaningless buzzing in Gloria's ears; she sat, bereft of all reason for a dull moment, then harboring quick, clear thoughts, as swift, as vivid as lightning, and in the end as blinding by their very quality of blazing light. The newspapers!

Still, dominated subconsciously by the thought which had brought her to the telephone, Gloria managed before the connection was broken to beg her mother to come immediately to her at the log house; to tell every one that Gloria was with her father. Her mother promised; began asking questions, and Gloria said a bleak "good-by" and hung up.

The newspapers, Gloria, her face whiter and whiter, looked into emptiness and saw headlines that towered as high as immense black cliffs. Her mother had telephoned Mildred Carter; had confessed that Gloria had gone out with Mr. Gratton; was gone all night, no one knew where; Mildred Carter who was as good as married to Bob Dwight of the Chronicle! And the emergency hospital—Gloria with never a tear coming in her hour of greatest distress sat rocking back and forth on her chair, crying: "Oh, I wish I were dead!"

As one hears noises through a dream, long powerlessness to connect them logically with familiar happenings, so now did Gloria absently hearken to Gratton calling from the foot of the stairs. She jumped up only when she heard him start to mount them. Then, galvanized, she sprang to her feet, cried to him, "I'll be down in just a second," and ran to her room. She stood again looking at herself in her glass.

"Gloria Gaynor," she heard her own pale lips say, "you have gotten yourself into a nasty, nasty mess." The lips began to tremble; then, with a great struggle for will-power, they steadied. "And," said Gloria in a cold, harsh little voice, "it's up to you, and no one else, to get out the best you can this time."

She bathed her face and hands; she rubbed her cheeks with a towel, determined to bring some vestige of color back; she took down her hair. She brought from her closet half a dozen dresses; chose a certain pink one without analyzing the reasons of her selection, found silk stockings and pumps, and dressed from top to toe. She would have to have it out with Gratton, one way or the other—she began to know which way it would be. But always a girl should be at her best. Gloria was getting a grip on herself again. When, after Gratton had waited and fumed for upward of an hour, she went down stairs she looked cool and pretty, and quite unembarrassed. He flashed a look at her that was eloquent of nervous excitement.

"I want to explain everything to you, Gloria—"

"It will take a good deal of explaining, won't it, Mr. Gratton?"

They went into the living room and Gloria sat in a big chair while he stood before her, his fingers tapping and tapping at his cigarette case.

"I am afraid," he began, talking swiftly, "that I have been instrumental in placing you in a false position. Last night I told you I had telephoned to your mother. I did try; they reported the line out of order. What could I do? I didn't want to alarm you. It was only a lark; I meant innocently, you know that, don't you, Gloria?"

"Did you?" she said, and managed to keep her lips smiling.

"It is only since coming here that I have realized how things will look; what people will think—and say, curse them. Our being out so long together; my buying clothing for you—"

"Our being registered as Mr. and Mrs. Gratton—"

"Forgive me, Gloria! It was the mad impulse of a moment. I thought as we went in that it would look strange—a young, unmarried couple; that if I put down man and wife no one would think anything at all. And we'd be gone in a few hours and no one would know who you were."

"I see," Gloria's tone gave no clew to her racing thoughts. "You did that for my sake?"

"Yes," he said eagerly. "As I would do anything on earth for your sake. You know that, Gloria; you know, and have known for a long time—always—that I love you. And you will marry me, won't you?"

"Yes," But Gloria did not say it aloud; not yet. She merely said it perfectly clear to Miss Gloria Gaynor that she was going to marry Gratton, and that there was to be no further question of it. And, at this fateful moment, how she hated him! How she loathed and detested him! While a week ago—yesterday—she had wondered, dreamily, if she was in love with him! But that was when he was in the city, at home in his own wilderness. But now! She was in a trap. There was no way out, save through the gate of matrimony. And—in her heart she laughed at him—through that other wider gate beyond, the gate of divorce. She would accept his name; the name of Gratton stood high in San Francisco. Then she would tell him how she loathed him; she would laugh at him, for physically she had no fear of him. And he would never have her for his own, despite all of his money and his position and his hideous trickery.

Strange that the man had never revolted her as he did now! She wanted to get up and run from him. Meantime she was telling herself almost calmly: "Yes, you'll marry him. The little beast!" She did get to her feet; he followed her into the hall.

"Let me alone for a little while," she said quietly. She went to the stairway. "I am going upstairs; wait here for me—"

"You will come to me! You will marry me?"

"I think—so—Don't!" she cried sharply as he moved to come to her. "Wait—"

He swallowed nervously. "I—I hoped you would. And I saw how terribly the events of the last few hours might be misconstrued. So, Gloria, daring to hope, I sent word for a justice of the peace. He will be here this afternoon or this evening—"

"Justice of the peace!" Gloria's nerves jangled loose in his irrepressible laughter.

"We'll have a priest later, of course," he ran on hurriedly. "But I couldn't arrange for one so soon."

Gloria went slowly upstairs, walking backward, looking down on him with unfathomable eyes.

"Tell me, Gloria, I'll promise not to come near you until you say I may. Is it yes?"

"Yes," said Gloria, and was gone in a flash, turning, running up and out of sight.

He stood looking after her, tapping and tapping at his cigarette case.

CHAPTER V

To Gloria the sluggish moments were fraught with despondency or pulsating with terror. All arrangements were made; she was powerless, in a trap; a justice was coming; she was going to marry Gratton. She lay on her bed with the door bolted and wept bitterly, moaning over and over: "Oh, I wish I were dead!"

But great as was the emotional tension, lusty and now wearied youth must be served. She dropped to sleep. It was so very silent all about her; the shadows were creeping, creeping among the pines.

She awoke with a start. Someone was standing above her, looking down at her. She could see only the vague outline—

"Gloria—"

A little cry of fear broke from her. "Gloria," pleaded Gratton. "Don't you know I wouldn't—"

"I'll be down in a minute," she told him. "Go away, please. Wait for me."

"The justice is down stairs," he said, his voice agitated despite his effort for mastery. "Are you ready?"

"Yes, yes! In a minute I'll be down. Go. Please go."

He hesitated; began withdrawing. "When you are ready. And—he has a long ride back, Gloria. We should not keep him waiting."

She watched until he had gone. Then she crouched, staring with wide, unseeing eyes into the outside dark. The man would go right away; she would not have even him to mitigate the horrible condition of loneliness with Gratton.

"I won't marry him!" she cried out. "I won't. I hate him. He is a beast, and—I won't!"

There was, after all, nothing to force her. Nothing—save that she had been away all this time with Gratton, that he had bought clothing for her, that he had registered himself and wife. And the newspapers! She heard a door slam and sprang up! If he had justice went away now without marrying them! She would marry him; why, if he had been of a notion to demur she would have made him marry her!

Two hours ago Mark King had arrived. The caretaker, old Jim Spalding, was smoking his pipe on his bench. King paused, saying:

"Hello, Jim. Has Ben showed up yet?"

"No, he ain't showed, Mark. Expectin' him?"

"Yes. Who's in the house, then?"

"Why, some of 'em come on ahead. Ben's girl, for one, and that city guy, Gratton, for another."

Gloria and Gratton here? King frowned. He had had ample time during the long weeks since the twelfth of August to decide that he had nothing to say to Gloria Gaynor. And now she was here—with Gratton. He had no desire—or at least so he told himself very emphatically—to see either one of them.

"I've hit the trail hard today, Jim," he said as Jim followed him and King closed the door. "And I'm dead tired and as hungry as a bear. Needn't tell anybody I'm here. But keep your eye peeled for Ben, will you? The minute he comes I want to see him."

And after lying ten minutes staring up at the ceiling above him King went to sleep.

"Must of been goin' some today," meditated Spalding. "King looks tuckered."

An hour or so later he heard horses. "That would be Ben, now," was his first thought. He saw two men dismount and tie their horses; he saw the door open and Gratton come out. The horsemen went up to the porch. One was a little gray man whom Jim had never seen before; the other man, it happened, he knew, a good-for-nothin' scrawling, as Jim catalogued him, name of Steve Jarrold. (TO BE CONTINUED.)

Summer In Sweden

This Swedish Housewife Bakes Only Four Times a Year.

(Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)—WNU Service.

THIS year all Sweden is celebrating, with memorial rites and exhibits, the three hundredth anniversary of the death in battle of Gustavus Adolphus, the Swedish hero king.

Many are the ways of celebrating, for as the traveler moves about Sweden by canoe, coast steamer, river barge, motor car, railway or airplane, he is confronted with many peoples with customs and dialects unlike.

The differences, however, fade in retrospect and the outstanding impression one gets of Sweden today is of a closely-knit and homogeneous group. In its population an unusually pure Nordic type predominates—tall stature, long face, light complexion, golden hair and blue eyes. The blond complexion gives the streets of Stockholm a quality of lightness. In contrast, Paris seems somewhat somber and dark.

The one exception to the homogeneity of the population of Sweden is the Lapp. Some seven thousand of them, a race apart, dwell in the Arctic wastes of the Far North. In some vague past—their racial memory is short—they wandered in from the East, possibly from Mongolia. They have not stopped to carve their names on the eternal hills. They are deaf to the tread of the centuries. For them the music of life comes only through the singing of the wind above their nomad tents of bark and through the velvet tramp of fleet, vagrant reindeer hoof.

As protected wards of the Swedish state, members of this alien race roam securely over the tundras and snow-capped fields of the North. For more than a century Sweden has not been embroiled in war. At no time in its history has a conquering foe invaded its territory and left the customary aftermath of mixture of blood. During the past six years Sweden has entered more actively upon its humanitarian purpose of trying to outlaw war altogether.

Sweden has no colonies and so avoids entangling alliances. Its zest for empire and empire-building was worked off in the flush of youth. In the Viking days brave adventurers went West, and traces of their wanderings still exist on the coasts of England and France, Iceland and Greenland; but in many of the lands they touched they left no enduring record of occupancy.

Sweden's intervention in the Thirty Years' war saved the cause of religious liberty for Europe. Then came the brilliantly tragic reign of Charles XII. With his death in 1718 ended his gallant defense, as he alleged, of western ideals of statecraft against the threat of Muscovite anarchy. Sweden had lost its Baltic possessions. Its prestige as a world power diminished. The energy expended on extending empire has since been directed toward the more peaceful pursuits of developing internal resources.

No Immigrants There.

Sweden has no immigration problem, about 99 per cent of its six millions being native-born. Not immigration, but emigration, once threatened the national welfare. Before American immigration quotas were known, nearly a fifth of Sweden's population was represented in the United States.

Love of country dominates the Swedish people. Their songs reveal a passionate love for the beauty of the land which has been an unending source of inspiration to Swedish poets. The Swede's reputation for melancholy may be attributed wholly to his susceptibility to the vagaries of the weather. He is gloomy at the very thought of autumn, harbinger of the dark winter months. All the russet gorgeousness of September and October is wasted on him. He is quick to lament the briefness of the season of light. Remind him of some event in the past and he is likely to say reflectively, "Oh, yes, that was the year the summer fell on a Tuesday."

In that respect he is the arch pessimist. Stockholm, to be sure, is in very nearly the same latitude as the southern tip of Greenland. This means that approximately two-thirds of the country lies in latitudes generally considered unfavorable to habitation and growth. But the climate of the Scandinavian peninsula, with its jagged coast line sweeping down majestically from polar regions into the North and Baltic seas, is tempered by the warm Atlantic drift, which follows the western coast of Norway and dips also into the Skagerrack. There is a joyous glamour about the way spring and summer come with a rush. Almost overnight, in the South, one sees the beech forests turn into low ranges of jade.

The islands the transatlantic visitor sees first, as he nears the Swedish coast, are those that encircle the harbor of Goteborg (Gothenburg), chief shipping center and commercial port of the country; for the usual approach to Sweden is by the "lonely passage" that rounds the bleak northern tip of Scotland and then threads down among the islands in the Kattegat.

Goteborg and Stockholm are linked by a road of water, the Gota canal. This connects the North and Baltic seas and the large inland lakes, Vänern—the largest lake in Europe excluding Ladoga and Onega, in Finland and Russia—and Vatern and Malaren. The series of locks that provide for the varying levels in the route—the highest point is 308 feet above the Baltic—were an engineering triumph when constructed nearly a century ago.

Through Gota Canal.

North of this belt of water is another "lake district," including the Fryken lakes of Varmland, Lake Siljan in Dalecarlia, and Dellen in Halsingland, along the eastern coast. Farther north come the extremes of summer and winter. Where the Arctic circle cuts through the fjelds along the Norwegian boundary the sun is visible for 24 hours of the day for seven weeks in June and July. From any of the accessible mountain peaks the midnight sun is a breath-taking spectacle of magnificence.

With a few outstanding exceptions, there are no striking extremes of wealth and poverty in Sweden. There are no slums in Jonkoping, for instance, though it is the home of the world-famous safety match, one of the most important manufactures of the country. Eskilstuna steel, an equally familiar trade-mark, has not produced a Swedish Pittsburgh of vicious volumes of smoke.

The miners at Kiruna, north of the Arctic circle, live in a model community of neat, modern houses; and Falun, center of the Bergslagen mining interests, suggests neither luxury nor squalor, although one corporation, generally said to be the oldest in the world, has held continuous possession since 1284 of the great mine, Stora Kopparberget, with its vast underground pit.

Nearly All Live Comfortably.

The ordinary comforts of life are within the reach of the majority. With a highly developed telephone system, business and social matters are handled largely over the wire. At the hint of a delay, when a call is made, the Swedish operator answers, not "Just a minute," but "In the wink of an eye!" and she means literally and expeditiously just that.

The main railway lines, like the telephone, are state-owned. Private lines supplement rather than rival this service, which includes about a third of the total railway mileage of the country. Sweden has a more extensively developed railway system, in proportion to population, than any other European country. Third class is cheap and clean. Second far outranks the ordinary European second, and first offers luxurious means of travel.

The electrified railway that is farthest north in the world runs from Boden, below the Arctic circle, to Narvik, Norway's always ice-free port, through which much of Sweden's iron ore is shipped. The electrical current is supplied from Porjus, a modern industrial town that has sprung up in the wilderness of 25 years ago. The machine room at Porjus is sunk into a blasted mountain wall at a depth of 165 feet, a precaution that gives a hint of the low temperatures of the Arctic winter.

Electricity, derived from waterfalls and rivers, is being substituted by modern industry as fuel that in time will supplant the black coal which Sweden lacks. Black coal heads the list of imports and keeps the balance of trade unfavorable to Sweden, but white coal is beginning to take its place.

From the depths of the forests of Sweden—they cover approximately three-fifths of its land area—come the commodities that head the exports. Wood pulp, planed and unplanned boards, paper, beams, spars, mastwood, and box boards provide nearly half of the nation's annual revenues from exports.

POULTRY

VACCINE WILL SAVE LOSSES IN FLOCKS

Its Value Demonstrated by Experiments.

Chicken pox, a disease which annually takes a heavy toll in Illinois poultry flocks, can now be controlled with more safety as a result of experiments which the division of animal pathology and hygiene, College of Agriculture, University of Illinois, has made during the past year with different vaccines.

Pigeon pox vaccine proved superior to chicken pox vaccine, and consequently the former is being recommended to farmers and flock owners.

Proper vaccination at this season of the year will prevent losses from canker, avian diphtheria or chicken pox during the winter months, according to the laboratory. There is no medicine or serum that will cure the infection, but vaccination will prevent it. Growing stock that is running on range should be vaccinated during June, July and August. If vaccination is put off until fall, egg production may be lowered as a result of the extra handling of the birds as well as by the reaction from the vaccine.

Potent vaccines properly administered to healthy, young chickens produce an immunity against chicken pox that probably lasts for a year or longer. It is important, however, that chickens be free from intestinal parasites and other diseases before they are vaccinated.

The pigeon pox vaccine which is now being recommended causes less reaction than the chicken pox vaccine, and therefore may be used with less danger. A practical immunity is induced by the pigeon pox product. A limited supply of the vaccine prepared by the division of animal pathology and hygiene is available at a nominal cost to qualified veterinarians for demonstrational purposes. Veterinarians taking advantage of this supply are required to make a careful record of the vaccination, age and condition of the chickens vaccinated on blanks furnished for the purpose.

Keeping Poultry House Dry Not an Easy Matter

There is a fairly general opinion that dry air is lighter than damp air, and this opinion has some influence upon methods of poultry house ventilation, says the American Agriculturist. As a matter of fact, air rises as it becomes saturated with moisture, which makes it obvious that the outlet for moist, impure air should be near the top of the house if this excess moisture is to be removed by air circulation. On the other hand, the air intake should be somewhat lower, and then the fresh, cool, dry air will enter the house and accumulate near the floor, where it takes up moisture as it becomes warmer.

The principal difficulty comes during periods when the outside air is practically saturated with moisture before it enters the house. In such cases, the only practical way to keep the house dry is to raise the temperature inside the house. Although the body heat of the birds will raise the temperature some, it has been found that artificial heat is essential if the house is to be kept absolutely dry.

Brooding Problems

Chicks that are confined to a brooder house require much more room than those that are permitted to range during a part of the day. The average 10-by-12-foot brooder will accommodate only 300 chicks when confined, and from 300 to 400 when they are on range. Chicks that are reared in confinement are more susceptible to vices such as feather-pulling and cannibalism than those on range. Greater sanitation in the brooder is necessary when chicks are confined, and producers who use wire floors in the brooders escape many of the losses which sometimes are had on regular floors. Frequently, it will pay to build a wire porch on the front of the house so as to get the chicks out in the sun a part of the time.

Medicated Eggs

Most medicated or artificial nest eggs often recommended for controlling poultry parasites are nothing but ordinary naphthalene, of which moth balls are made, and are of no use whatever against lice, mites, and other parasites of poultry, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Naphthalene, explains the department, in a bulletin, does not kill or drive away poultry parasites, and may even injure good eggs and give a moth-ball flavor to the flesh.

Keep Chicks Cool

Shade is essential for successful brooding of late-hatched chicks. In early spring brooding, ninety degrees Fahrenheit at the edge of the hover is warm enough for the first week. After that the temperature can be lowered five degrees a week until 79 degrees Fahrenheit is reached. After chicks are five weeks old they need heat only at night. With late-hatched chicks it is hard to keep the temperatures low enough and vitality is sapped.—Prairie Farmer.

LOCAL HIGH SCHOOL EXPANDS PROGRAM

Miss Edna Smith, a former student at Jefferson High, returned this year to Jefferson High as a teacher. Miss Smith graduated in the class of 1927, and continued her education in San Mateo Junior College. After graduating from Junior College, Miss Smith entered Armstrong's College of Business Administration in Berkeley. In 1931, she was awarded a Bachelor's Degree of Science in Commercial Education, and in 1932 she was awarded a Master's Degree in the same subject. While attending college, Miss Smith majored in secretarial science, which includes stenography, typing, and office practice.

Miss Smith was delighted with the many changes and improvements that have been made in the school since her attendance here. She now teaches typing at Jefferson and is the only teacher that has been added to the faculty this term.

The following is an alphabetical list of the incoming frosh:

Agresti, Albert; Anderson, Karin; Armstrong, Lillian; Arnado, Celesta; Baldacci, Alice; Beecher, Dottie; Bernal, Myron; Boni, Ernest; Bosio, Eddie; Bracco, Alma; Bull, Helen; Burrow, Donald; Camenzind, Alma; Carboni, Elizabeth; Chipman, Wini-fred; Ciardella, Julio; Coleman, Elma; Curtis, Gordon; DeMaria, Tony; De-Ram, Alice; Del Buono, Evelyn; Dow-dell, Earl; Durbin, Louis; Elder, William; Ford, Benny; Foss, Donald; Francesconi, Josephine; Garabidian, nard; Green, John; Gressani, Joseph-Florence; Gianni, Ida; Graziani, Lea-line; Gusti, Albert; Gust, Marie; Higum, Kenneth; Hermansen, Erna; Holcomb, Marjorie; Hudson, James; Hutchings, Bill; Hohnsen, Arvid; Keithley, Viva; Kelly, William; Klau-ber, Sonia; Lemos, Lillian; Loomis, Thomas; Luttringer, Frank; Mar-cicchi, Norma; Miller, James; Miller, Grace; Molinari, Dorothy; Moore, Leona; Murray, Mary; Olson, Victoria; Paoli, Julio; Perada, Adeline; Pfeifer, Norbert; Ragghianti, Paul; Randle, Edna; Ray, Margaret; Sheri-dan, Jack; Spratlen, Irene; Taylor, Alice; Toloir, Ottavio; Tuvo, Adelle; Vernengo, Garava; Wilson, Jack; Zimmerman, Ella; Zook, Betty Jane; Zugar, Florence.

All seniors who plan to enter college next fall are now required to take a course in English A, according to an announcement made by Mr. Ferguson. This action was taken in order to have the graduating students thoroughly prepared for college entrance examinations.

The course in English A gives a student a thorough review in grammar, punctuation, and composition, thus allowing the pupil to receive every possible bit of information necessary for him to pass university entrance tests.

One Semester Course

The course is complete in one semester of instruction and is given during seventh period. If some seniors find that they cannot take this subject during this time, they should report the fact to Mr. Ferguson or Miss Staib, and, if possible, a desirable change will be made.

Mr. Ferguson also wants it to be known that no college preparatory student who has not had English A will be recommended in English by him.

Jefferson's cooking class is glad to announce that a school cafeteria will be opened next Monday, August 22, in the cooking room.

The project will be under the supervision of Miss Hoover, domestic science teacher.

Cooking was first taught about a year ago and has been very successful so far. The girls will start by serving one hot dish per day, with the menu being increased as time goes on. The main idea behind the project is to give the cooking class experience in quantitative cooking and the students wholesome food.

Miss Hoover emphatically states that all dishes served will be guaranteed to satisfy.

Several Jefferson students and alumni members journeyed to San Luis Obispo or Capitola as part of the National Guard during the last two weeks in July. Those who took the trip were: Hubert Capps, Jim Foley, Salvador Guerrero, Carl Klotz, Aldo Malaspina, Richard Oppermann, Nick Sanbrailo, and William Shauer.

During the stay at camp, Jim Foley and Sal Guerrero were awarded medals for their deftness and ability to handle a machine gun. Carl Klotz, William Shauer, and Frank Torres were presented with similar emblems after distinguishing themselves on the rifle shooting range.

Night school at Jefferson will start next Tuesday night, August 23, at 7 o'clock. The courses open to adults will be auto mechanics, English for foreigners, typing, and bookkeeping.

The typing course will be given in Room 19, the bookkeeping course in Room 20, the automobile instruction will take place in the auto shop, and the English class will be held in Room 12.

All adults living in the district are invited to register for these courses. Starting next week, regular night school sessions will be held on each Tuesday and Thursday from 7 to 9 o'clock.

According to a Washington correspondent, the new Reconstruction Finance Corporation has already collected a rather extensive and expensive staff, whose salaries and special fees now run from three-quarters of a million to a million dollars a year. No less than 122 employees draw $5,000 a year or more—most of them a great deal more. Salaries of $7,500, $10,000, $12,000 and $15,000 are plentiful. But even so, the R. F. C. doesn't begin to compete with the Farm Board subsidiaries, one of which pays $75,000 a year to its cotton "expert" manager.

An interesting item concerning word trade is this: Japan sent sixteen million yards of rayon goods to India in 1922, thirty-three million in 1930, and seventy-two million in 1931. Perhaps if we would devote more energy to finding foreign markets, and less to convincing ourselves that it is impossible, we might fare better.

Vets Must Wear Pajamas On River Boat Excursion

According to rumors and trickling news from encampment headquarters, all delegates who plan to attend the Thirty-third National Encampment at Sacramento, August 28 to September 2, are warned to include a pair of street pajamas in their knapsack, if they do not wish to miss one of the biggest entertainment features that has been prepared.

The official program from the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States announces that the delegates will board a river boat on the Sacramento river for a midnight cruise that has been described by the committee in charge as the biggest feature of the convention. Although all delegates are eligible for passage on this moonlight boat, none of them will be able to pass the guard at the gang-plank unless he or she is arrayed in a pair of pajamas. Fashionable yachting costumes will not be permitted, and even ex-gobs and marines, such as Davey Jones Cosbie, wearing their sea-going uniforms, will get no further than the dock, unless they are prepared to make a quick change into pajamas before going aboard.

The style and pattern of the pajamas will be left to the discretion and imagination of the wearer, with no official specification as to noisy shades and futuristic designs. Bill Campbell will have to change his idea of what he intends to wear, as the committee has already announced that "old-fashioned" night-gowns will not be recognized as pajamas.

Another official restriction pertains to the wearing of medals, ribbons or campaign badges. Even the hero who has won himself a Distinguished Service Cross or Medal of Honor will receive no special dispensation on this ruling. Pajamas must be absolutely barren of all military decorations, and the only badge that will be permitted will be the one that designates its owner as either a delegate or alternate to the Encampment.

In response to many queries for details, the committee in charge has thus far but one statement to issue to inquisitive delegates: "Be sure to bring your pajamas, but do not come with the intention of sleeping."

Rumors are persistent that President Ethel Dorn is busily engaged renovating her beach pajamas (the ones with the large spots) for this occasion, and was overheard asking Commander Dorn if "lace and pink ribbons" were considered military decorations.

Crosby Pledges Aid in Any Move for County Benefit

Wide interest in the activities of the State Legislature this year will be evidenced in San Mateo County, with a number of issues, important to the taxpayer, to be considered. It appears now, according to political observers, that there will be several things of importance to this county before the state body.

One of the principal issues probably will be that of cross-county highways, so necessary in the development of the county, and those in close touch with the situation claim that real effort will be needed to win for this county its fair share of state aid. In addition to the highway problem, there will be the balancing of the state budget, and a number of other things, in which the county will be vitally interested.

William Crosby, in a statement to the press today, stressed these issues and said that in his fight to represent this county in the state senate he had pledged his untiring efforts to any constructive move for the benefit of the county. Crosby is seeking the new state senatorship recently allotted to San Mateo county under the state re-apportionment bill.

In his statement, Crosby, who has been a business man in the county for many years, said: "It becomes apparent to the taxpayers of San Mateo county that they should have aggressive representation in Sacramento if they would achieve things for the county. Little has come to this county during the past six years from Sacramento. We are entitled to more than we have received, and if I have the honor of representing this county in the state senate, I shall certainly fight hard to bring us the recognition we deserve."

"San Mateo county needs a man in this post who has the confidence of the officials and the folks back home, and who will co-operate with them in their efforts to make this the finest and most progressive county in the state."

Most automobiles of the past and present have suffered in efficiency through "dumb design," according to W. B. Stout, himself a noted automotive designer and engineer. Correct design should include more interior space; multi-cylinder, high-speed, silent engines of 50 to 100 horsepower; clutch working with throttle and no other connections; acceleration from standstill to 60 miles an hour in eight seconds, etc. Unfortunately for most of us, such a car would cost $2,000 or more.

Recently the Prince of Wales celebrated his thirty-eighth birthday. Perhaps what the prince will consider the most important event of the past year is that he realized for the first time every golfer's ambition, to make a hole in one.

Jurors Warmly Commend Judge Franklin Swart

To the Honorable Franklin Swart, Judge Superior Court No. 2, County of San Mateo:

We the undersigned Jurors, in attendance, in Superior Court No. 2; hereby commend you for your diligence to business of the Court; promptness in attendance, quickness in moving to conclusion, without unseemly haste, cases on trial.

Your unfailing courtesy to all parties, having business to transact, in the Court. For your fine judicial decisions, which are approved and acceptable to all Attorneys and Clients, as being fair and impartial. After due thought and consideration of candidates applying to the people for election to the Judgeship, which you now hold, we think that the voters of San Mateo county will be doing justice to themselves by selecting you as the Judge to the Superior Court No. 2, where you now preside with dignity and honor.

We realize that it is very hard for a Judge to solicit votes; it more becomes the people's duty to work for and elect an efficient and capable jurist.

Therefore, it is resolved that we will make every effort possible to acquaint the voters with your many fine accomplishments, to the end that they will choose you to fill the high office of Judge for Superior Court No. 2 of San Mateo county. We know that you will be a Judge for all people, regardless of race, creed or color or fortune; and we know that you will uphold the dignity of the court by enforcing the laws of our land, with clarity of vision, yet with common sense, kindness and mercy to all persons.

Signed:
James Mulryan, Mary D. McGuire, Thos. E. Lorton, Margaret Warren, Eugene J. Dunen, Josephine Weller, Lucy K. Mayer, H. P. Ross, Mabel Selinger, Flora E. Steele, Grace Hartsough, Arthur J. Adams, Reba Lowenthal, Grace L. Tallmadge, B. A. White, Harry A. Peckham.

P. G. & E. Hands State Largest Check to Date

August 15 was anything but "blue Monday" for State Treasurer Charles G. Johnson. Instead of having to worry about paying a sheaf of bills for the state's running expenses, he was on the receiving end for a change. He took in $3,214,934.27 in a single check, one of the largest ever received by the state treasury.

This amount was paid to Johnson by the Pacific Gas and Electric Company and covers the first installment of the utility's state taxes for the fiscal year from July 1, 1932, to June 30, 1933. The second installment, payable next January, will bring the company's state tax payments for the year to $6,429,908.54, representing seven and one-half per cent of its gross revenue. This figure makes the Pacific Gas and Electric Company the second largest taxpayer in California, with only the Southern Pacific topping it.

The August 15 tax payment by the Pacific Gas and Electric Company—$3,214,934.27 for the 183 days of the half year—works out at the rate of $17,568.05 a day. The sum would pay the wages of 3,513 men at $5 a day for every day in the period, Sundays and holidays included.

The $6,429,908.54 collected in taxes from the P. G. & E. for the year will finance a large share of the state's activities, according to State Treasurer Johnson. The sum will more than pay salaries and other expenses of both houses of the legislature, state offices, state courts, schools, hospitals and institutions, prisons and correctional homes. In addition, it will pay for free textbooks for the children, enforcement of narcotic laws and crime detection, old age pensions and still leave a substantial amount to defray other expenses.

An exchange reprints a dispatch from Paris at the opening of the peace conference in 1919, which contained this paragraph: "It is said that Germany will be made to pay to France, England and Belgium one hundred billion dollars in indemnity." Anyway, Germany now owes only three-quarters of one per cent of that amount, according to the recent Lausanne agreement.

SAN MATEO COUNTY TAXPAYERS SAVED $16,000 A YEAR FOR LAST 20 YEARS

Just a moment's figuring shows that the above saving to San Mateo county taxpayers has reached a total of $320,000 for the twenty-year period.

Quite a remarkable bit of economy this, and an unusual achievement when you stop to consider that in order to do it, one man was forced to nearly double his work, when he easily might have shifted the burden and forgotten the taxpayers. But he didn't.

Back in 1910 San Mateo county became entitled to two Superior Courts and two Judges, but SUPERIOR JUDGE GEORGE H. BUCK told the taxpayers he could save them expense by increasing his own efforts.

Each year for the next twenty years the work kept growing heavier and becoming more demanding upon the efforts of Judge Buck, but he shouldered the burden and kept pace with his court work, starting early in the morning and working until late in the day.

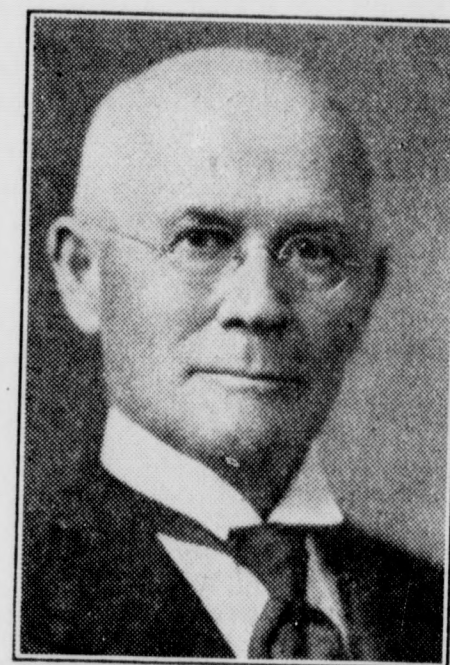

County records show that it costs approximately $16,000 a year to operate a Superior Court in San Mateo county. Multiply this by the twenty years Judge Buck carried the burden alone, and it reveals a saving to the taxpayers of $320,000.

Only last year, when the rapid growth of the county swelled court business to an unprecedented volume, was another court established.

This service is only one of the many great services to the public Judge Buck has rendered during his career on the bench. Assumption of such arduous tasks as were necessary to effect this economy proves beyond dispute the capability of the man performing them.

Judge Buck's faithfulness to the trust reposed in him by the people has won for him their high esteem, marked respect and deep confidence. His keen business sense has helped to safeguard their material welfare.

This devotion to your interests will continue if you

POPULAR COUPLE UNITED AT PRETTY CHURCH CEREMONY

In a ceremony beautiful in its simplicity in St. John's Cathedral in Albuquerque, New Mexico, Miss Mary Tandy Brownlee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse E. Brownlee, of Santa Fe, became the bride of Fletcher Cook, son of Mrs. Louise Tarkington Cook, of Mission street, Daly City. The ceremony was performed by Dean Matthews of St. John's Cathedral, last Sunday, at 2:30 o'clock, in the presence of relatives and friends. The church was decorated with baskets of Shasta daisies, which made an aisle for the bridal party. In the foreground sheaves of gladiolas were placed in front of the deep red drapes. The wedding march from Lohengren and a program of wedding music by Ralph Coons, organist, preceded the ceremony.

The bride wore a dress of white silk and carried a white hat. Her flowers were arranged in an old-fashioned nosegay. Miss Betty Applegate was the maid of honor and wore a white sport suit and hat. Booth Tarkington, of Raton, a cousin of the groom, acted as best man. The ceremony was performed in Albuquerque because of sentimental reasons on part of the bridegroom's family. Fletcher Cook is the son of the late Rev. Fletcher Cook of the Episcopal church. About twenty-five years ago he was sent to Albuquerque, where he helped to plan and build St. John's Cathedral. Dr. Cook was also a member of the board of regents at the University of New Mexico. Mr. and Mrs. Cook were both graduates of the University of New Mexico, last June.

The newlyweds left for a motor trip to California in the afternoon following the ceremony, going via the Grand Canyon. They will also visit the Petrified Forest. They will make their home in the bay region, where Mr. Cook plans to enroll at the University of California to study law. Mr. and Mrs. Cook have many friends in Daly City who join in wishing them much happiness in their new partnership.

WOODROW WILSON P. T. A. HAS INTERESTING SESSION

The Woodrow Wilson-Vista Grande Parent-Teachers' Association members held their regular meeting on Tuesday in the Woodrow Wilson school. Mr. J. Doyle, chief of police, gave a talk on safety, advising the mothers to consult him in their difficulties at any time. Mrs. Rapier, Seventh grade teacher, prepared an article on Parent-Teacher activities. to be read at the meeting. She also sent in three children from the Seventh grade to entertain the mothers.

Mrs. Blades, of San Diego avenue, was appointed Magazine chairman. Mrs. Hutchings and Mrs. Brown will conduct a campaign for new members during August, September and October.

The lunch and reception for the teachers and mothers will be held on the regular meeting date in October. Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting by Mrs. Virginia Callen, vice-president, in charge of the committee.

Automobile Association is Quarter of a Century Old

Marking a milestone of progress in the history of motoring development in this state, the California State Automobile Association this week celebrates its twenty-fifth anniversary. The Automobile Association was founded as a non-profit co-operative organization of car owners on August 17, 1907, by a small group which met in San Francisco. The primary purpose of the founders was to work for good roads, which were then almost entirely lacking, in contrast to the fine highway system of today. There were then only 14,000 motor cars in the state, compared to a present total of more than two million.

From the beginning the growth of the Automobile Association has closely paralleled the advance of motoring in California. Rounding the quarter-century mark, the Association ranks as the second largest organization of motorists in the world, and the largest of the nation-wide chain of clubs affiliated with the American Automobile Association.

Its membership today is in excess of 80,000. Highway development has remained in the foreground of the Association's civic policies, and it has successfully supported financing and other measures for a system of modern motor routes serving all parts of the state. As the official road signing agency for Northern and Central California, the Association has developed a standard, uniform system of warning and directional signs representing today an investment of more than a million dollars. Three-quarters of this expense has been borne by the Association out of membership dues, the remainder being contributed by state, county, and local governments.

The cost of maintaining the road sign system, amounting to upwards of $40,000 a year, is met entirely by the Association out of its own funds. Day and Eva Marshall, sisters, recently arrived in New Orleans in their rowboat after a trip of eleven weeks down the Mississippi and Ohio from East Liverpool, Ohio.

Miss Virginia Corish, of San Diego avenue, who recently announced her engagement to William Webb, Jr., of San Francisco, was the honored guest at a recent bridge tea given by Miss Mae Costello in her home in San Francisco.
